G Gateway Review	Gateway is an assurance methodology for major investments which was developed by the United Kingdom's Office of Government Commerce (OGC) in 2001. It is an independent and confidential peer review process that examines projects and programmes at key points in their lifecycles to assess their progress and to rate the likelihood of successful delivery of their outcomes. Gateway is not an audit, and does not stop a project or programme. The OGC Gateway process: adds a second level of assurance increases confidence in alignment of projects with Government strategic objectives increases confidence in investment decisions increases confidence in delivery of required project benefits to time and budget Gateway is applied in a number of international jurisdictions including the United Kingdom, the Netherlands and Australia. It was implemented in New Zealand in 2008 on the direction of Cabinet, and to date more than 150 reviews have been completed
